Turning the Tide

The ocean's trash is Washed Ashore's treasure. Volunteers at the Oregon arts nonprofit have used 25 tons of discarded flip-flops, bottle caps, toys, and other beach debris to create more than 80 larger-than-life sculptures of marine animals whose health is endangered by plastic pollution. Learn how you can lend a hand (and where Daisy the Polar Bear, Priscilla the Parrotfish, and the gang will be exhibited next) at washedashore.org.

The Showings Must Go On

Across the country, movie theaters are shuttered and slushy machines are silent. But thanks to a trio of quick-thinking producers—Tribeca Enterprises, Imax, and AT&T—entertainment is coming soon to a big screen near you. The Tribeca Drive-In series, which kicked off June 25, is delivering a selection of contemporary films, cinematic classics, and special music and sports events to old-school venues and other outdoor spaces nationwide. ## The High Five

A WHOLE HANDFUL OF THINGS TO CHEER ABOUT THIS MONTH!

The Notorious L.O.C.

Think hip-hop and the Library of Congress have nothing in common? You haven't checked out Citizen DJ, an interactive tool that lets you make your own beats using 32,000 samples (and counting) from the library's audio and video collections, including a recording of Franklin D. Roosevelt addressing Congress, the tinkly score of a 1900 silent film about a cartoonist, an interview with Olivia Newton-John, and so much more. Sounds like a rapper's—and nonrapper's—delight. ### XX Marks the Spot

Any idea where America's first female dentist set up shop? Or where Emma Willard established the country's first secondary school for women? In honor of the centennial of the 19th Amendment, which gave women the right to vote, the National Trust for Historic Preservation is crowdsourcing 1,000 locations where ladies made history—including sites both landmarked (the home where Susan B. Anthony was arrested for voting in 1872) and overlooked (the house where Juliette Gordon Low held the first-ever Girl Scouts meeting, below). To help put women on the map, visit savingplaces.org.

Constellation Prize

Since 1990, the Hubble Space Telescope has roamed galaxies far, far away, capturing stellar snapshots of distant planets, exploding stars, and other cosmic wonders. To mark the project's 30th anniversary, NASA went back through all those shots and chose 366—one for every day of the year—for an online gallery. Enter your birthday or any day (the nebula shown here was shot on February 8, 2014) and get ready to see something out of this world.
